A LETTER FROM YOUR NEW PRESIDENT

Hello fellow R6'ers! A new season of riding, visiting, meeting new and old friends is just around the corner. It was good to see everyone at the R6 convention in Lincoln, Nebraska. Kristi Chapman-Webb and crew did an outstanding job! At the General meeting on Saturday we had election of new state representatives, with yours truly be elected for Kansas R6. I then was elected as president for R6 board. I feel that I have some big shoes to fill, as Kim Downing has done a wonderful job this

REGION SIX CONVENTION

By Cheri Jeffcoat

What is the very best thing about our annual region convention?

Why, seeing all our friends for the first time since the last ride!

On Friday night, the hospitality room was on fire! Plenty of shrieks and hugs, the buzz of everybody catching up on news. The obvious joy of everybody anticipating the upcoming season was a wonder to see. And the Nebraska team manning the room went all out of food and beverage. Even making frozen fancy drinks.....the blender was roaring.

Saturday registration went smoothly and the famous door prize drawing started and continued through out the day. The agenda started with Dr. Smalley discussing First Aid for our horses when traveling and on the trail. Since he owns horses and travels his ideas and suggestion were timely and practical.

Our next speakers were Ann Henneman RD and Joyce Jensen led off with a quiz on human food safety with prizes for the winners. The general consensus was that we probably didn't know as much about it as we thought! It was a fun quiz with common sense ideas. If you learned nothing else, keeping your hands clean and your food area clean was demonstrated.

Our final speaker, Dale VanVleck spoke on color genetics of horses. A speaker with a dry sense of humour and plenty of pictures to illustrate his points. We learned many factors to consider when instituting a breeding program for color.

The general meeting of the Region 6 membership included the annual election for seats on the Region Board of Directors.

The Saturday evening awards banquet had a

Hawaiian Lau theme and many member dressed in fun theme attire.

The presentations were able to exceed by Dick Webb. Region 6 awards and a myriad of National were presented. The evening was culminated with the annual auction which raises funds for the management of the Region.

What was the best thing about convention? Why the opportunity to see all our horse pals!

Emergency Management Warning 21

West Nile Virus Positive Bird Reported in Missouri

The State of Missouri has reported the finding of West Nile virus (WNV) in five dead crows collected in the St. Louis area. Presence of WNV in the crows was confirmed by the U.S. Geological Survey's National Wildlife Health Center in Madison, Wisconsin.

This is the first-ever detection of WNV in Missouri and almost certainly indicates local transmission of the virus. No human or equine cases of WNV infection have yet been detected in Missouri.

More information on WNV including links to State and local WNV web pages is available on the APHIS website at: <http://www.aphis.usda.gov/oa/wnv/index.html>

If you have any questions, please contact the USDA, APHIS, Veterinary Services, Emergency Programs staff at 301-734-8073, 800-940-6524, or EMOC@USDA.GOV.

Please forward this information to other Federal, State and industry counterparts as necessary.

First West Nile Virus Vaccine For Horses Released

by Stephanie L. Church

Date Posted: 8/1/01 5:21:17 PM

Last Updated: 8/2/01 8:20:54 PM

The equine industry called out for a way to protect its horses from the deadly neurological disease West Nile virus (WNV), and researchers and federal authorities responded.

The United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) and Fort Dodge Animal Health announced Wednesday, Aug. 1, the approval and release of the very first WNV vaccine for horses. The virus had already begun to appear in horses in the panhandle of Florida. This is the southernmost and earliest onset of equine cases in the three years since the virus first appeared in the Western

MARCH/2002

Hemisphere. To be conditionally licensed, the vaccine had to meet federal standards of purity, safety, and reasonable expectation for efficacy. Each state will have to give approval for the vaccine's use, and most states have conditionally licensed products available only through a veterinarian.

West Nile virus hit the northeastern United States in 1999, baffling public health officials and epidemiologists when it killed birds, horses, and humans. Officials are still not sure how the disease was introduced in the United States, but they believe after studying the genetic makeup of many virus samples it was a single introductory occurrence. The virus is spread by the bite of an infected mosquito and harbored by birds. West Nile virus killed 36% of its diagnosed equine victims in 1999, and 38% in 2000.

Officials hope the vaccine will give veterinarians the upper hand in preventing the appearance of equine cases, which typically do not occur until late summer or early fall. (Learn more about the history of WNV in this country at http://www.thehorse.com/news/index\_westnile.html).

Ernest W. Zirkle, DVM, New Jersey's state veterinarian, explained that roughly 100 doses of the experimental WNV vaccine were released in early summer to practitioners in his state and seven other states that had experienced the virus in horses in 1999 or 2000. The vaccine didn't have any adverse affects in these tests for safety. "If the practitioners were really having problems with it, we would have heard about it, so it seemed to go smoothly," said Zirkle.

"(When testing a vaccine for safety) we look at everything from lumps and bumps post-vaccination, to more serious reactions such as stiffness, lethargy, loss of appetite, or anything out of the ordinary," explained Tom Overbay, DVM, Director of Professional Services at Fort Dodge Animal Health. "We definitely have a product that does no harm. We certainly don't want unrealistic or unreasonable fear of the virus; we want horse owners to use a product because they think it is good medicine."

The killed vaccine consists of a two-dose initial series of injections given intramuscularly. The vaccine is a "first generation" product, meaning that other approaches are already in the works to provide a vaccine that will allow better differentiation between horses naturally exposed to WNV and horses which have been vaccinated for the virus. According to industry sources, there should be 25,000 doses of the vaccine immediately available, and 4,000 more available at the first of September. In mid-September, Fort Dodge should release another 200,000 doses of the vaccine, followed by a possible 600,000 by the first of November. The vaccine price should remain in the ballpark of the costs of routine equine vaccines.

"The USDA was extremely proactive in working with this particular organism," added Overbay. "They recognized the seriousness (of WNV) to the horse industry, and were extremely diligent in their efforts to review data and to expedite (the requests) of companies that are working on the vaccine.

"Because of the speed with which the USDA has approved this vaccine, the initial supplies will be somewhat limited," Overbay explained. "We recognize the importance of this vaccine in protecting horses, so we're going to produce vaccine as quickly as possible, recognizing that we want to provide two things -- a quality product, and production in an environment that is safe for our production department." Since the virus is a human pathogen, Fort Dodge employees adhere to strict guidelines in handling the agent in its live form.

The obvious question is will the vaccine it prevent WNV in horses? Overbay explained that the vaccine has been shown to stimulate an immune response in the animal against the virus. "Whether the immune response that is stimulated is the correct immune response to prevent the disease, that's something continual testing will answer for us," he said. Proof of an immune response has been used to grant full approval to other equine vaccines used to prevent Eastern/Western/Venezuelan encephalitis, and this represents the same criteria in approving human vaccines.

Horses affected by parasites or suffering from inadequate nutrition cannot mount as strong an immune response against WNV as horses which are healthy and on a good preventive health care program.

Only time will tell whether this vaccine will be a solution to the problem of disease in horses caused by WestNilevirus.

This is fun, but you'll need a calculator-

Take the number of the month you were born

-Multiply by 4

-Add 13

-Multiply by 25

-Subtract 200

-Add the day of the month on which you were born

-Multiply by 2

-Subtract 40

-Multiply by 50

-Add the last two digits of the year in which you were born

-Subtract 10,500

Notice anything funny about your answer?

A woman walked into the kitchen to find her husband stalking around with a flyswatter.

"What are you doing?" She asked.

"Hunting flies" he responded.

"Killing any?" she asked.

"Yep, 3 males, 2 females", he replied.

Intrigued, she asked. "How can you tell?"

"3 were on a beer can, 2 were on the phone . . ."

When I think of diamonds, my mind comes to two people. Well maybe they fit as diamonds and some bits of charcoal. These two people, I hate to say, have changed my life. They've made me a better person, made me nicer and given me a new riding style; "stop, drop and roll." These people helped me at my first trail ride to have fun and actually participate. I didn't know what competitive trail riding was. I just like being out with my horse. Crupper? Cattle Bag? They befriended me at dinner before briefing on Friday. At briefing they gave me a map, which I didn't have, and lent me a flashlight. I busily watched as they wrote down things such as "Don't get lost!" My first day of trail riding consisted of questions. Seven hours? Are you sure? How much longer?" and lot of singing. As we pulled into camp, I asked another question, "We have to do this again?" The next afternoon waiting for awards was a fun one for me. I listened to stories of all the horses those two people back home, where they lived and how they got together. I was disappointed when the horn honked for the awards, not because I'd had a horrible ride, but that I would have to wait months to see all of the wonderful people again at the ride.

The time passed quicker than I thought and soon I was beginning my first full season of competitive trail riding. Those two people were still right there beside me, letting me borrow things, telling me about the judges, telling me that I missed a spot while cleaning my horse. They were also there at awards to cheer me on no matter where I placed.

It was somewhere near the middle of the year when I became closer to them than before. I became "Gungadin." I was also half adopted. They said they adopted the good half of me. That is if there is one. They also promised to look after the bottomless pit I lovingly call my horse. They've treated me with such kindness and love; I could only be called one of their daughters.

It's not all sugar though. I've gotten the bluntness, the yelling and the correcting. I've received the "It's bedtime" spiel. I truly am "one of their own." As I star my new, forced, Open career I will look to them for the same guidance, the same criticism, the same camper or that same amount of hair, but the will always be my adopted mom and dad. These two people are Bryce and Bobbi Bedsworth.

Without him, I don't believe there would have been a Diamonds in the Rough ride. Without him, I doubt if there would have been lots of rides, as he has put on a great many, often in new places, carving out the trails where there were none.

For this newbie Ride Manager, he was heaven sent. He answered countless questions, counseled, consoled, and wisely advised. He made numerous trips to mark and map trails. When both John Seibert and I had arms in slings, he really had to do double duty! He was my strong shoulder to lean on all during the ride. He rode safety and was general Mr. Fixit in camp. I truly do not know what I would have done without him.

He is quick to lend a hand if you are in need, lending equipment, parking your trailer if you can't do it, and countless other things. I have no idea how many years he has offered his auctioneer services for our year end auction. Many times he brings his tents and sound equipment to rides that need them. He is a safety rider, ride manger and competitor.

He has been the leader in setting a fashion trend for menswear in our Region. Who can for get his Peter Pan pants? Why, he's got a whole group of men wearing them now!

For these and other reasons to numerous to mention, my Diamond of the Year is Steve Lindsey.
